

Chris Larson

VP for Learning & Development

Areas of Expertise

Coaching

- Leadership
- Onboarding
- Career Management
- Talent Development

Facilitating

- Strategic Planning
- High Performance Teams
- Building Rapport
- Change Leadership

Training

- Leadership 360 Assessment
- Communication Styles
- Strengths
- Coaching Skills for Leaders

Bringing over 20 years of experience as a coach, educator, and facilitator, Chris Larson, VP of Learning and Development for Mission Facilitators International, works with organizations to provide customized engagements that elevate the capacities of their leaders and teams to create meaningful impact. Chris's specialty is with STEM industry professionals, where he has worked with hundreds of teams and individuals through partnerships with over 140 organizations in the high-tech, chemical, bioscience, healthcare, academic, and government sectors.

Chris is a skilled and knowledgeable facilitator with real-world experience. Leveraging his background in talent management, social cognitive neuroscience, leadership development, and adult learning, he takes an integrated approach to help clients:

- Reframe and solve persistent problems
- Improve team dynamics
- Cultivate healthy cultures
- Lead change with courage and resilience

Chris began his career as an industrial research and development chemist, has held director-level positions in two research universities, and holds a master's degree in chemistry from the University of Oregon. He has dedicated the past 15 years to the examination and facilitation of leadership and professional development and holds a certificate in neuroscience from the NeuroLeadership Institute.